

Papier-mâché egg, decorated with craft paint and decorative foil

Create a pretty Easter gift box for sweets from a simple two-part papier-mâché egg using paint, decorative foil and decoupage varnish.

We'll show you how to do it here.

1. First paint the egg with craft paint according to your own ideas.

2. Then apply a coat of découpage varnish onto the entire surface.

3. Take a sheet of adhesive film and cut off the corners and protruding edges.

4. Remove the plastic layer.

5. Rub the edge of the adhesive film onto the egg surface (this works best with a folding bone) until the adhesive is completely bonded to the egg.

6. Now carefully remove the plastic adhesive film from the transferred motif.

7. Now place the decorative film on the adhesive motif and rub the film firmly onto the surface with the folding bone.

Carefully peel off the decorative film. This transfers the decorative film to the adhesive film design.

8. Now the small motifs that were previously cut out of the adhesive film need to be placed on the egg.

This work will be easier if you treat one motif at a time.

9. Place the decorative foil on the adhesive foil, rub it on with a folding bone and carefully peel off the decorative foil.

Continue until the egg looks the way you want it.

10. If you want to paint the egg in two colours, you should first apply masking tape to separate the areas.

11. Apply the two colours and decorate the egg with decorative foil once it has dried.

12. The finished eggs not only make pretty gift packaging, they can also be used as a decorative box for sweets next Easter.
